“Pádraig Rynne, Dónal Lunny and Sylvain Barou are three names that would individually excite any traditional music fan.”

About the trio:

When three such influential and creative musicians work together it creates a great excitement with followers of Irish music and this has been very evident with the number of people that have flocked to see their performances already over the past three years.

The material performed is a mix between old and newly written music by the trio as well as a few songs by Dónal.

Dónal Lunny is founding member of bands such as Planxty, The Bothy Band, Moving Hearts and Coolfin, all who have helped shape Irish music in an innovative way as only he can. He is probably the most respected and well known Irish musician of all time.

Pádraig Rynne is one of the most in demand musicians in Ireland at the moment. He is founding member of Guidewires and is involved in many ground-breaking projects of our modern era in Irish music. He is considered to be one of the trend setters in Irish music and is involved in many fusion projects.

Sylvain Barou is Breton music's finest. January 2012 saw the release of his first solo album and he is credited by many as having helped Breton music evolve in a new way. He has a number of recording credits to his name in various genres and has been working with the best known musicians in world music over the last number of years.
